Up to within very recent years a model had to be submitted with every application for a patent, and thus it was that an immense collection was gradually got together, many of the inventions representthe first typewriter, the first ice cream freezer, and so forth. This last, by the way, was originated by a Philadelphia woman-Mrs. Nancy Johnson.

Oddities of Invention.

It is natural that the freak inventions should attract the most attention, and because of the exceptional interest displayed in regard to them by visitors some of the queerest are exhibited as conspicuously as possible. The prize oddity of the whole collection is the steamboat contrived by Abraham Lincoln, which was provided with huge bellows-like arrangements on both sides, intended to be inflated with air whenever the vessel should chance to be stuck on a shoal, thus lifting her off. It does not appear that the device ever proved to be of practical usefulness.

Thomas Jefferson, however, was the inventive President. It will be remembered that his plow proved to be a most sub stantial improvement over any implement of the kind previously known. He originated a sulky carriage, a walking cane in three parts which could be converted into a chair, the now familiar copying press, and the revolving chair. This last is in common use to-day, as is likewise the common use to-day, as is the continued, turning hastily to switch that convertible into a stepladder, which was the idea of Franklin, the first piece of furniture of this pattern being constantial rock cut in mission style, "and the still under the continued of the moon, as she waved me to a subplump figure or pad a slabby one into perfect curves, the way she bants and pants and works in order to look like a copy of him to reach with ease the books on the upper shelves of his library in Philadel-phia.

Early Flying Machines.

Experience in such matters has proved that it is by no means safe to condemn a seemingly absurd novelty in the way of an invention, for in a good many instances such freaks have proved to be extremely valuable. Some of the earlier flying machines, models of which have been exhibited as absurdities at the Patingly. ent Office, embodied ideas which have found practical expression in the dirigible plied bluntly. Machine to Make Dimples.

Then there is the dimple maker. It is a wire mask, intended to be worn at night, and is provided with several blunt wooden points so arranged as to press upon those spots where dimples are desired. Another of the curiosities of the Patent Office is a tornado-proof house, which revolves on pivot, so that if it happens to be struck by one of those dreadful funnel-shaped twisters it will simply whirl around and bands," and I turned my note book with without losing its grip on its a snap.

STORY OF PENTECOST

History of the Birthday of Christ's Church.

NEWMAN'S WRITINGS PRAISED

Reference to Cardinal's Works to Show that He Was Not Favorably Disposed Toward Teachings of Modernists-Pius X and the Indian Preservation Society in the West.

New York, June 6 .- As Pentecost, the Feast of Weeks, was one of the three great feasts of the Jewish year, so Pentecost Sunday, which falls this year on June 7, is one of the three great feasts that divide the Christian ecclesiastical year into three seasons, viz., Christmas, preceded by the four weeks of Advent; Easter, preceded by the six weeks of Lent, and Pentecost, fifty days after Easter, and from which all the following Sundays of the year till Advent are dated.

The English name for the feast is Whit Sunday, and is derived, according to Skeat's Etymological Dictionary, from the Anglo-Saxon "hwita Sunnandag," meaning White Sunday; probably so called from the white robes worn by those whom it was customary to baptize by immersion at this season.

To Christians the day is especially sacred, for on it, at the third hour-i. e., upon every one of them; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they began to speak with divers tongues," so that some twenty different nationalities assembled in Jerusalem heard them speak each one in his own tongue.

This was the birthday of the church, when she received her full mission to teach, and began to preach the gospel to all nations, as she has continued to do to this day, converting and civilizing the peoples of the earth as no other teaching oody in history has ever done.

Benedict XIV mentions many beautiful symbolical customs which prevailed in some places commemorating these events, such as the blowing of trumpets at the hymn "Come, Holy Spirit," in the mass of Whit Sunday, the discharge of fire from the roof, letting doves loose in the church, and the scattering of roses.

At a recent meeting of the Knights of Columbus of St. Paul, Minn., a resolution was unanimously passed expressing their appreciation of the "I. C. T. S. Notes and Comments" appearing in the Dispatch of that city and in other papers throughout the country and the hope that
